ABSTRACT

The scope of discovery protocols on network domains of devices and services is extended. A search message or an announcement message on a multicast channel in one domain gets encapsulated into a unicast message that is sent to a second domain. The multicast message is extracted from the unicast message in the second domain and is input to the second domain's multicast channel.